Applied Psychology--The psychology of knowing, feeling and willing is discussed in its relation to school management and methods. The object of this course is to enable teachers to teach and govern more intelligently and to place discipline on its proper basis. V. Practice Work--The importance of the work in the practice school cannot be over-estimated as it is here that the student meets and overcomes difficulties in the matter of discipline and, what is more important, learns to put into practice the. theory of teaching. All lessons are carefully prepared by the students and presented under careful supervision. Before teaching a lesson, the pupils observe while similar lessons are being taught. The teacher should be trained to teach in all grades of the common school. It is desirable in the coming year to increase the facilities for practice teaching. At present...
