By the co-operation of the War Department, the Surgeons-Generals and Adjutants-General of the states, much can be done to co-ordinate the National Guard sanitary service with that of the regular army. Many of the Medical Department forms of papers should be used. Surgeons should be consulted as to camp sites and other sanitary arrangements. Each brigade or division should have a sanitary inspector with power and responsibility. More field instruction should be given the sanitary troops in summer camps. In the joint maneuver camps, the regular medical officers should arrange more frequently for combined sanitary instruction rather than inspections. Many of these improvements could be made without any general upheaval.-- Transportation of Sick and Wounded See Ambulance Companies Dogs--Sanitary Service Stretchers SANITATION See Sanitary Service ( SCHWARZLOSE...
